Need to keep distractions at bay

Technology has enabled almost every individual with an easy access to knowledge and information, gradually shifting the focus from classroom learning to the digital platform. It also provides the learner endless choices to strengthen his/her proficiency in the subject. However it demands determination and perseverance from dedicated learners. In fact many have climbed the ladder of success with such appetite for knowledge and such success stories are in plenty.

However there are many distractions lurking both in the matrix of information available in the net as well as in the social system, relentlessly angling for innocent and virtuous learners. A few wrong clicks or shares may land an individual in deep sea, resulting in a situation too complex to solve. Sometimes even minor academic failures of students may get amplified into anxieties and inadvertently lead to negative traps. Once into it means darkness, leading to nowhere.

Hence all responsible learners, along with the focus on their chosen fields of interest, must develop a strong resolve against all negative temptations. This determination is as significant as the main academic contemplation of students. Let the small failures of life not deepen into complex distractions. In fact failures provide us an opportunity to try the better alternative. We get ample evidences in history of individuals who have single-mindedly pursued their fields of interest to achieve greatness in life, without falling prey to distractions. Let such examples guide us towards better and safer academic accomplishments.

Prof. Satheeshchandra S.
