What do we understand with the help of photography?

Photography used to cost an arm to leg a long time back: Each camera role used to cost a lot of money, to process into negatives and later print them as photos used to be charged separately. A single role of the camera could produce only 30-32 images. Therefore the photographers had to be extremely careful while clicking a single photo.

Things have changed over a period of time. We no longer use analogue cameras or camera rolls. It's digital and looks candid. With the advent of mobile phone cameras, selfies have become increasingly popular. As it is a handheld device, it's a great power in the hands of everyone. We click, check the photos, edit them if needed, make minor/major modifications if required, analyse the output, share the photos with family and friends, upload them on social networks and receive feedback.

Education today is also under such a paradigm shift. From the traditional teaching-learning methods, we have come a long way into the digital era with umpteen options in the hands of the students: Courses, programmes, institutions and the way one earns credits. All these changes aim at comprehensive, inclusive and learner-centred approaches to improve the quality of education. This a great power now the students have in hand, that they can make valid choices, build their knowledge, and later their career. NEP 2020 aims to hone improvements in the quality and quantity of scholarly output. As we move to the second year of implementation of the batch of students of NEP, the number of ideas is becoming clearer and more apparent. I hope the students reap the best benefits of the system.
