Lessons from BioMimicry

We have been observing a steady increase in temperature day by day. An increase in temperature can induce different changes on the earth like severe droughts or intense rains as well as more frequent and severe heat waves. And these changes frequently present challenges to our society and environment. Increasing anthropogenic activities have released large amounts of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases into the atmosphere. GHGs are like a blanket around the earth, trapping energy in the atmosphere and causing it to warm. Due to the intense deposition of greenhouse gases, the climate changes and result in dangerous effects to human health and ecosystems. A warmer climate can bring changes that can affect our water supplies, agriculture, power and transportation system, the natural environment and even our own health and safety. Keeping cool in warm weather is a multi-faceted challenge. The simple, effective and affordable ways to remain cool in warm weather include staying hydrated, choosing cooling foods, protecting from the sun, dressing to keep cool and keeping the dwelling areas cool.
